German-born Rainer Schulte is a creator first, a scholar second. He has a deep commitment to literature and the arts, and he shares it with his students.

Creating a Capacity for Innovation

Text by Jan Kissner Cady '65/Photographs by Lois Siegel '68

RAINER SCHULTE'S detractors would have you believe his unruly brown hair earned him his reputation as "Wild Man of the English Department." (Admittedly, one of Schulte's least concerns is his hair, and it often looks like a cross between a modified-Dylan cut and an Australian aborigine's.)

Those who know him will tell you his appearance is only incidental to the following he has gained at Ohio University.

A free-wheeling, debonair bachelor when he arrived on campus three years ago, the young assistant professor came specifically to initiate and to direct a program in comparative literature.

European-born and educated, he has brought some of the best of his former milieu to Ohio University. He has built his reputation as a stimulating, demanding teacher, and—without losing his Continental attraction—he has lost his bachelorhood. In the spring of last year, he married Sandra Smith, a part-time instructor in modern languages.

Schulte is a creator who dares his students to create, a poet who stimulates his mind by challenging the minds of others, and an artist-musician who lives his philosophy—"Anything is possible."

"What I'm after, really after," he says, "is to reorient the study of literature to such an extent that there is a possibility of jumping out of the more traditional and conservative approaches into some kind of approach which is mentally stimulating." Meaning, in essence, that the factual, chronological and historical sequence to literary study—the "horizontal approach," as Schulte calls it—is Out in his eyes. What's In is a "vertical approach" to literature.

"I'm trying to define a basic sensibility of an age, of a particular literature, of a particular area and then to relate this sensibility to art and music.

"Comparative literature used to mean you were studying that Hemingway influenced some European writer, for instance, or that Flaubert influenced Henry James. That's all very nice, but ultimately of no value. In studying influence, you must ask, 'What did the author do with the influence?' Or, 'Why did he go beyond his basic premises?'

"I want to develop an overall view of literature again so people can form a vision, so they can become concerned with more than just detail."

Schulte urges his students to build up their backgrounds in foreign languages. "For an English major not to know a foreign language is pure nonsense," he says. "A student who knows only one language is seriously handicapped in his attempts to study a literary period which involves an interplay among authors who write in many languages."

In the classroom — and out —

Schulte emphasizes creativity, which he defines as "the capacity for innovation."

He tries to create a classroom atmosphere where "ideas can happen. The first thing I make absolutely clear is that there are no basic requirements in my courses, in the sense, for example, of having an objective quiz every Monday morning. A quiz doesn't prove anything.

"I believe one of the biggest problems in the academic world is that most students are just put into a system. Once you put someone in a system you are in danger of ruining him because his original, fresh reaction to something is being killed. What I want to do is to stimulate that reaction. Students should not have to repeat what I or someone else has told them. They should be able to come up with their own ideas, approaches and stimulation.

"The first responsibility a teacher and an artist has is to promote continuous creation."

Schulte is exceptionally well qualified to recognize creativity in others. He has studied literature in his native Germany, in France, Italy, Spain and the United States. He completed his bachelor's degree at Dickinson College while simultaneously pursuing a career as a concert pianist. Later he wrote his dissertation at the University of Michigan under the tutelage of Austin Warren. He has published many poems and is currently awaiting acceptance of a book of poems.

Perhaps Schulte's major contribution to literature and to the Department of English has been in his role as editor.

On his own initiative—and in keeping with his philosophy—Schulte began publication of Mundus Artium, the only bilingual journal of international literature and the arts in the world. In the journal Schulte and associate editor Roma A. King, professor of English, are attempting to present the new movements occurring in the arts.

"A primary reason for starting the journal," Schulte explains, "was that whenever I wanted to do something in the program there was no reference I could rely upon. I figured if I started my own bilingual reference, I could rely upon it in the long run."

A FORMER CONCERT pianist, Schulte finds stimulation in music. It sets the pace for his creativity both in and out of the classroom.

In initiating the journal, which is published by the English department, Schulte wrote to noted writers and artists throughout the United States and Europe and traveled abroad making contacts for the publication. Now in its fourth issue, Mundus Artium is distributed extensively in the United States and in Europe and, on the basis of its first issue, was awarded first place honors among literary magazines in the United States by the Coordinating Council of Literary Magazines.

"There is a need for a journal which gives the reader a cross-section of the more established writers as well as the younger upcoming writers who have something to say; artists who have influenced their generations and those who are just about to break through in their own generation.

"Some kind of exchange is imperative," the editor emphasizes. "If you get something published in France which is very good, for example, it takes about five years to get over to the United States and vice versa. However, if you have a continuous exchange of literary works and ideas, then everybody knows what's going on."

The first issues of Mundus Artium included poetry by world-renowned German novelist Günter Grass; fiction by Friedrich Dürrenmatt, Swiss playwright, and a photographic interpretation by theatrical photographer Max Waldman of the Royal Shakespeare Company's New York production of Marat-Sade.

"What I'm after is to get hold of those poems, those short stories, those articles which have something really vital to say right now and which are going to survive for the next 20 years. You have to have a vision. Once you have a vision you can adjust to the details."

His own writing, his interest in music and editing Mundus Artium have added extra dimension to Schulte's life.

"I believe that in order to maintain his sanity and to avoid becoming stale, a teacher should ultimately spend no more than half his energy in teaching. His own work must be at least ahead of his other half. He must have something he's being stimulated by, and that stimulation can then be transferred into the classroom.

"If one day I have the feeling I'm repeating myself in the classroom and the feeling persists, I'll realize I have nothing new to say and I'll pull out, not so much in the interest of somebody else, but in my own interest.

"There's something wrong if you're just repeating yourself and you have nothing new to say. There's nothing worse than becoming stale intellectually."

For Schulte, there's little danger of that. His "capacity for innovation" is apparently unlimited.

Whatever happened to majorettes?

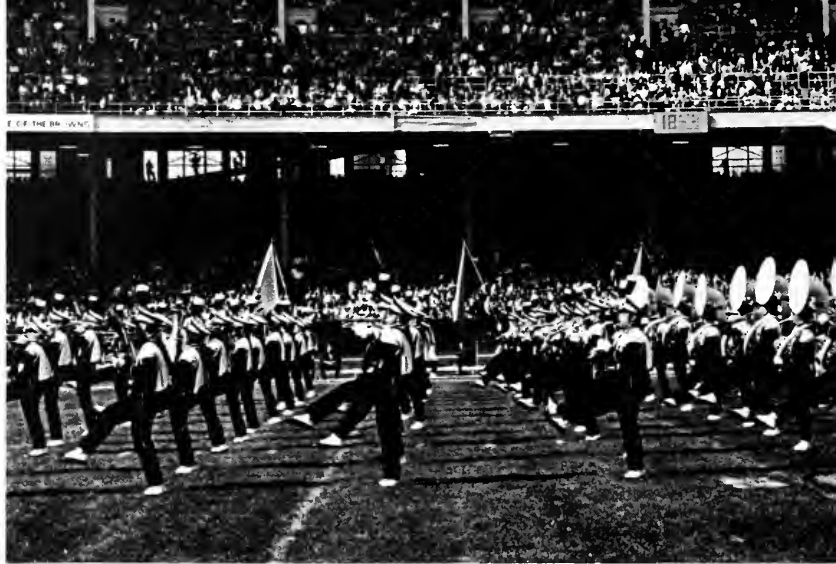

Gene Thrailkill became director of University bands in the spring of '67 and one of his first acts was to issue an edict: no women in the marching band. No curvy trumpeters, no statuesque saxophonists, no shapely drummers and no majorettes. The reaction was swift and expected . . . and it died just as swiftly and expectedly. Thrailkill and his Marching Men of Ohio have been on the scene nearly two years now, and hardly anyone (with the possible exception of Norma Partlow and a few ex-majorettes) ever mentions the days when Ohio's marching band displayed pulchritude in its ranks.

Justifiably proud of his men and their new "Motown-Beatles-and-blues" sound, Thrailkill will tell you at the drop of a half-note that during the '68 football season at least 215,000 fans saw the Marching Men of Ohio in person and nearly 25,000,000 (that's twenty-five million) saw and heard the band on television. The band's first exposure on the tube came Sept. 29 when the band performed at the Cleveland Browns-Los Angeles Rams game in Cleveland Stadium. The NFL game was shown on the East and West coasts, and the band's half time show brought congratulatory letters from viewers in a dozen states. The group's second TV appearance was at half time during the Tangerine Bowl. The bowl game and the band's show were carried by Sports Network, Inc., affiliates throughout Ohio. The final score of the Ohio-Richmond contest was a disappointment to Bobcat fans, but the band's performance, according to at least one newspaper report, "rated thunderously with the crowd."

The membership of the marching band fluctuates between 100 and 120, and roughly half of the bandsmen are music majors. The esprit de corps is high, thanks partly to the skill and high-stepping antics of sophomore Drum Major Dave Fowler, and the "dropout rate" has decreased from about 65 to 45 per cent in the last two years. Many of the marching band men also play in the other two bands Thraikill directs. The symphony band, open to men and women, gives two concerts on campus each year and makes a spring tour of communities in Ohio and neighboring states. The concert band, also open to both sexes, performs at various campus events and gives at least one concert annually.

But back to the majorettes . . . Thraikill made his decision partly because of the national trend and partly because he wanted Ohio to have the first all-male band in the MAC. "Besides," he contends, "men work harder, march faster and play louder . . . and without women, there's no chaperone problem on road trips."

Women, he's convinced, are all right . . . in their place. But that place isn't in the Ohio University Men's Marching Band.

A MARCHING BAND spends a lot of time on its feet, but its stomachs are important, too, as Drummer Jon Spengler illustrates with the remains of the box lunch provided by the Cleveland Browns' staff.

Three Out, Four In, Four to Go

Richard Moffat, '37, doesn't hold a patent on his solution for beating the rising costs of a college education. But no one can challenge his eligibility to employ it freely.

He's sparked in his children the desire to work hard for what they want, and for Moffat, that is as much a necessity as it is a solution.

This fall—for the second time in five years — four of his children are enrolled at Ohio University.

In a statement, which sounds more like an understatement, Moffat says: "I've always stressed the importance of a college education to my children. First, what it can mean to themselves and second, the importance others place on it. I've helped them as much as I can," the father of 11 and grandfather of two says, "and they've been willing to help themselves."

The Moffat children are scholarship winners and academic grant holders. They've worked during the summers and also part-time while attending school. Most of them have won recognition for holding key positions in campus organizations, and some have been tapped for membership in campus honoraries.

Perhaps for these reasons Moffat, a veteran newsmen, finds educating his children — even by fours — more a privilege than a burden.

The Moffat's oldest son, Dick, '64, enrolled at Ohio University in 1959 on a General Motors scholarship. A year later, Bob came to Ohio. Marilyn, '66, was on scholarship when she joined them in 1962. Marie enrolled at the University one year later, and for the first time, there were four Moffats on Ohio's official roster of students.

"The first ones to attend Ohio liked it," Mrs. Moffat remarks. "I'm sure this influenced the others."

A chemistry student at the University, Dick is now employed by Firestone in Akron where he, his wife Lois, and daughter live. Marilyn, now Mrs. Charles Meeks, teaches physical education at Lima Senior High, and Marie lives in Barnesville with her husband, Dennis McCrate, and their son.

"We've tried to make our children aware of the importance of doing well in school," Mrs. Moffat says, "but we haven't put on pressure. We realize that each is an individual. Some will do better than others."

Bob, who left Ohio University to serve in the U. S. Marines before returning to the campus last year, is a senior studying industrial engineering. Dave, also a senior, is a mathematics major and, like his brother Dick, holds a General Motors scholarship. Carolyn, a sophomore, has chosen physical education as her major, and Paul is a freshman studying chemical engineering. He, too, holds a scholarship.

The Moffat alliance with Ohio

University, although intensified during the last ten years, goes back to 1933 when Richard Moffat enrolled as a freshman. He spent three years on campus before leaving during the depression.

Job-hunting took him to Lima where he found work as a copy boy for the Lima News and began a 19-year association with the paper. Since leaving the News as an editor in the late 1950s, Moffat has filled various editorial posts on northern and central Ohio newspapers. Currently, he is state editor of the Sandusky Register.

Moffat's brothers also attended Ohio. Thorne, who works for Standard Register in Englewood, was in Athens for one semester in the 30s. Dana, '34, teaches music in Temple City, Calif. Dana's wife, the former Ethel Bulen, also is a '34 graduate.

It will be a few years before any of the younger Moffats carry on the family tradition. When that time comes, however, there's the possibility that, once again, there could be four Moffat children enrolled at Ohio University at the same time. Howard is 15, Mike is 13, Mary Kay is 11 and Julie is 8.

As for their father, he's hoping his unpatented solution can stand the test of time.

“WHEN WE WERE IN SCHOOL the word alumni was sort of distant—almost impersonal. True, there was a fellow named Clark Williams who was alumni secretary then. I hadn’t the vaguest notion of what an alumni secretary did, although I had an inkling that it had to do with old people—like perhaps Civil War veterans.

“I know now, however, what it means to be an alumnus of Ohio University. World events have brought a sense of significance to it all.”

With that confession, Wallace Hodes began his address to nearly 100 members of the Class of 1943 attending the concluding banquet of their Silver Anniversary Reunion Oct. 5. Master of ceremonies Robert M. Wren, head baseball coach, and speaker Dr. Samuel J. Jasper, professor of mathematics, like Hodes members of the reunion class, joined him in urging the class to demonstrate “pride and support” for the University.

“Who would have dreamed when we marched out from under the elms and into service that a young man who was then a Naval lieutenant in the Pacific and who was destined to become the President of the United States, John F. Kennedy, would come to speak here?” Hodes asked.

“Who could have imagined that a young Congressman who had just volunteered for Naval service would come here as President Lyndon Johnson?

“Who could have guessed that an Army general in North Africa named Dwight Eisenhower would arrive in Athens by helicopter as a past president to receive an honorary degree?”

These men, and others — John Glenn, Dag Hammarskjöld, Ralph Bunche, William O. Douglas and Arnold Toynbee — came to the University “not by chance,” Hodes said, “but in good part as a civic duty to try, from their vantage points, to put the world in perspective for Ohio’s students.

“Why Ohio? Because in part, we as alumni, each in his own way, by his own deeds, have made the name of Ohio University a respected one with which world figures are proud to have their names linked.”

Hodes lauded President Alden, saying, “In large part, the exciting changes . . . all about the campus are attributable to him. Statistics about the University’s growth are only part of the story.

“It’s the intangible values, the standards of excellence which have been set which have contributed most significantly to the University’s eminence. Few students have passed through the University in recent years without being imbued with the awareness of a changing world and without participating — perhaps unconsciously — in the selection of higher personal goals and the striving for an improved society.”

The word alumni comes alive, Hodes stressed, when in addition to fulfilling their individual roles in society, alumni also contribute their energies to “this institution which presents education in new and exciting ways and now stands with distinction among the finest in our nation.

“There are countless ways for alumni, both individually and through alumni chapters all over the country, to share in this experience. A contribution in time or dollars or effort or recruitment of prospective students,” Hodes told his classmates, “is a very satisfying experience.”

In addition to the Saturday dinner dance, the 1943 alumni held a class meeting, toured the campus and attended the Ohio-Miami football game during the weekend. During the class meeting, they voted to pledge $1 to the University for every year since their graduation.

PRESIDENTIAL SEARCH

Two special advisory committees, named to aid the trustees in the selection of a new president for the University, have been meeting regularly to screen candidates for the post.

The University advisory committee and the alumni advisory committee were appointed by Trustees Chairman Fred H. Johnson, '22, in October to enable "all sectors of the University and the community to substantially contribute the wisdom and experience of their members in the selection process."

Dr. Edward Stone, distinguished professor of English, is chairman of the University advisory committee and represents the College of Arts and Sciences on the committee. Other faculty members include Dr. Lowell B. Howard, business administration; Ronald Williams, communication; Dr. Robert M. Boyd, education; Dr. William D. Baasel, engineering and technology; Sherwood E. Hall, fine arts, and Dr. George Lobdell, the faculty representative on the trustees' presidential selection subcommittee.

Administrators on the committee are Dr. Robert L. Savage, vice president for research and industrial liaison, and Dr. Gifford W. Crowell, dean of the College of Education.

Representing the non-academic employees are Frank Gilbraith, vice president, and Mrs. Beulah Carpenter, recording secretary, Local 1699, American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees. Fritz Wheaton, chairman of the Athens City Planning Commission, represents the Athens community.

After his efforts to have a student appointed to the presidential selection subcommittee failed, Student Body President David Stivison named three students to the University advisory committee. They are Bob Christie, a senior and last year's student body president; Anne B. Harris, a graduate student, and Brian Riordan, a senior in arts and sciences.

Five members of the alumni advisory committee, chaired by Richard O. Linke, '41, vice president of the Alumni Association, met in December to revise the presidential profile they will use in screening applicants.

Those attending were Eugene Rinta, '38, alumni president and the alumni representative on the presidential selection subcommittee; Mrs. Jean Waingenfeld Kainsinger, '58, president of the Cleveland Women's Club; Mrs. Alice Edwards Wright, '27, a member of the alumni board; Elizabeth Herbert, '22, past alumni board member, and Perry W. Johnson, '58, a member of the Minneapolis chapter.

Others on the 13-member alumni committee include Dr. Emil Kustin, '40, president of the New York New Jersey chapter; Robert Gudikunst, '50, president of the Kansas City chapter; Henry Wiley, '42, president of the Tampa-Clearwater chapter; Paul Brickman, '46, president of the Chicago chapter; Cruse W. Moss, '48, president of the Ohio University Fund Board of Trustees; Joseph S. Gill, fund board secretary, and Clarence Bryan, '32, past president of the Alumni Association.

In addition to Dr. Lobdell and Rinta, other members of the presidential selection subcommittee are trustees Joseph B. Hall, committee chairman; Russell P. Herrold, '16, and C. Paul Stocker, '26.

FEES INCREASED

When students began the winter quarter Jan. 7, they were paying the highest fees in the University's 165-year history.

As approved by the Board of Trustees in December, the comprehensive registration fee was increased $30 per quarter from $170 to $200 for Ohio students and from $370 to $400 for out-of-state students on the Athens campus. Fees at the new campuses went up from $165 to $180 per quarter.

In raising the fees, the trustees implemented the action of the Ohio Board of Regents who last November lifted the moratorium on fee increases at state universities.

The increase, approved reluctantly by the trustees, was necessary "to avert a serious financial situation," according to President Alden. The additional $780,000 expected from the increase will just about balance out what would otherwise be a deficit of $800,000 this fiscal year, President Alden said.

UNION AGREEMENT

After 14 weeks of negotiations, the University and Local 1699 of the American Federation of State, BOBCAT Gerald McKee, No. 32, tips in two points during the Ohio-Indiana contest Dec. 3, which Ohio won 80-70. The game was the first in the new Convocation Center, and Gov. Rhodes, President Alden and several University trustees were on hand for the official dedication.

County and Municipal Employees reached a new two-year understanding Oct. 28.

The agreement, later ratified by the local membership, became effective Nov. 1 and calls for an improved insurance program for all nonacademic employees and a no-strike pledge by the union.

Under the agreement, the University will assume payment of the total family plan premium for the current hospitalization and medical program and payment of the current life insurance program. After July 1, payment of a new life insurance program and a new major medical program will be assumed by the University.

Other items in the agreement include uniforms, a management orders provision and overtime.

RECORD ENROLLMENT

Computerized operations in the Admissions Office indicate that a record 22,296 students enrolled for the fall quarter, an increase of nearly five per cent over last year's 21,282 students.

The total enrollment included 16,998 on the Athens campus and 5,298 at the new campuses and in other off-campus academic programs.

Freshmen on the main campus numbered 4,540 and graduate students 1,522, with an additional 157 students pursuing graduate work off campus. Students came from 42 states and from 41 foreign countries.

COLLEGE INAUGURATED

Veteran CBS newscaster Walter Cronkite and Marshall McLuhan, director of the University of Toronto's Centre for Culture and Technology, took part in inauguration ceremonies for the new College of Communication Sept. 30.

Cronkite, addressing the community on "Dissent and the Press," expressed alarm at the "witch hunters" who "since Chicago" are advocating controls on the press. "The basic freedom of no pressure," Cronkite said, "must be kept for journalists to allow them to report openly and freely."

McLuhan, who appeared under the auspices of the Kennedy Lecture Series, spoke on "War and Peace in the Global Village," the title of his most recent book. He also is the author of Understanding Media and The Medium is the Message.

Approximately 50 representatives of other universities and public school systems heard plans for the new college on inauguration day and witnessed "topping out" ceremonies of the $4.1 million building which will eventually house the college.

Enrollment in the four schools which make up the college — journalism, radio-television, interpersonal communication and hearing and speech science — is more than 1,000. There are 54 faculty on the staff.

Other well-known personalities appearing on campus during the fall were former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations George W. Ball, and Simon and Garfunkel, who wrote and performed the music for The Graduate. Muhammad Ali, former world heavyweight boxing champion, spoke on black separatism and former Harvard faculty member, Dr. Timothy Leary, and Dr. Sidney Cohen, medical researcher in the field of hallucinatory drugs, debated the use of LSD.

ALUMNI GIVING '67-'68

Private financial support to the University from alumni for the 1967-68 fiscal year totaled $222,363, according to the annual report of The Ohio University Fund, Inc.

Included in the total figure were pledges of future gifts valued at $56,825 from 11 alumni and the receipt of $111,001 in cash from 1,883 alumni; $11,397 in securities from seven alumni, and $43,140 in gifts-in-kind from three alumni. The total value of gifts other than pledges received from alumni was $165,538.

Excluding pledges, the number of alumni contributors shows a drop of 56 from 1966-67 when 1,949 alumni contributed more than $212,000.

Of the 11 alumni pledging future gifts, $1,825 was pledged by seven alumni and $55,000 by four new members of the Trustees' Academy. Other pledges not included in these figures came from 612 members of the Class of 1968 who pledged $31,935 in the Senior Class Challenge campaign sponsored by The Ohio University Fund, Inc.

UNDEFEATED during the regular season, Ohio's Bobcats suffered a 49-42 loss to the Richmond Falcons in the Tangerine Bowl Dec. 27. Nearly 5,000 Ohio students, faculty and alumni were in the stands, and some 300 alumni and guests attended the Thursday banquet.

Additional support of University projects and programs during fiscal 1967-68 totaled $1,898,181 from 983 contributors. The figure includes pledges of $140,000 from eight new non-alumni Trustees' Academy members and $1,925 from 17 other non-alumni and the receipt of cash, securities and gifts-in-kind totaling $1,756,256 from 958 friends of the University, corporations, foundations and organizations.

The largest single contribution both in physical size and in tax evaluation was the Litton Industries' McBee Systems' $1,025,000 gift of property and buildings near the campus. A number of University departments are now housed in the former McBee buildings.

In addition to the McBee gift, other non-alumni gifts included 549 friends who gave $185,632; 263 corporations and foundations, $360,116, and 146 organizations, $135,508. Additional gifts of $50,000 were designated for support of the University's new campus at Lancaster.

The total giving during 1967-68, including all pledges and gifts of cash, securities and gifts-in-kind from alumni, friends, corporations, foundations, organizations and the senior class was $2,152,479. More than 3,400 individuals and institutions contributed to the total.

The gifts were placed in the areas designated by the donors or, if unrestricted as to use, were allocated by the The Ohio University Fund Board of Trustees.

Cash gifts were designated to the following areas: student aid, $211,843; endowments and foundations, $34,897; faculty enrichment, $16,642; research, $12,400, and library, $14,733. Included in the library figure were gifts from 46 members of the Class of 1918 who designated their 50th anniversary gifts for library acquisitions. The remaining $129,085 was allocated by the fund trustees to various University accounts for immediate needs.

DR. KRECKER DIES

Dr. Frederick Krecker, a faculty member from 1929 to 1952, died Sept. 1 at Sheltering Arms Hospital, Athens.

Chairman of the biology department from 1929 to 1936 and chairman of the zoology department from 1936 to 1947, Dr. Krecker retired in 1952 as professor emeritus of zoology.

honors in Greek, Dr. Krecker received his MA from Cornell and the PhD from Princeton. He also studied at Munich, Freiberg and Chicago.

One daughter, Mrs. Landis (Elizabeth) Baker, '45, and one son, Frederic Krecker, '40, survive.

CONDUCT RULES SET

Twelve rules and regulations governing the conduct of persons on the campus and at University-sponsored functions were established by the Board of Trustees at its September meeting.

Among the things listed as "unacceptable conduct" are the use, possession or distribution of narcotics or illegal drugs; illegal or unauthorized possession or use of firearms, explosives, dangerous chemicals or other weapons, and obstruction or disruption of University functions, both academic and social.

The rules, unanimously approved, were adopted as required by the Ohio General Assembly of all state-assisted universities.

At the same meeting, the trustees further liberalized women's hours, extending to junior women a no-hours policy similar to that approved for senior women last year.

The board also voted to permit the sale of 3.2 beer in Baker Center.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

WASHINGTON — The newly organized chapter was host at an Oct. 10 banquet to 100 alumni from ten states to kick off the Alumni Association's fall football tour to Williamsburg. Banquet speakers included Bill Burt, '36, toastmaster; Gene Rinta, '38, national alumni president, and Tom Fess, '59, club president. A farewell reception for President and Mrs. Alden March 28 is the chapter's next scheduled activity. Area alumni may call Fess at 202/565-3146 for details.

GEORGIA

ATLANTA — Forty members of the chapter met May 11 at the Glenridge Clubhouse for a steak roast in honor of President Alden, who was accompanied by Bill Loftus, '58, associate alumni director. Milton O. Berry, '50, retiring president, installed the new officers: Charles Bell, '55, president; Thomas F. Jones, '64, vice president; Nancy K. Whitacre, '55, secretary, and David A. Whitacre, '53, treasurer.

At the Sept. 7 meeting, Jerry Reese, University director of admissions, explained how Georgia alumni can assist in student recruitment. Interested alumni in the area may call Bell at 404/451-0287 to be placed on the chapter's mailing list.

Details concerning the March 29 dinner honoring President and Mrs. Alden will be mailed shortly.

ILLINOIS

CHICAGO — Area alumni have set March 17 for a testimonial farewell dinner for President and Mrs. Alden. Tentative site is the Bismark Hotel. For further information, contact Paul Brickman, '46, at 312/467-6800 or Don Shafer, '37, at 312/439-1530.

INDIANA

INDIANAPOLIS — The Hoosiers met Oct. 20 on the grounds of the Fourth Estate for a family picnic. Guests from Athens included Bill Loftus and Ohio freshman Kathy Dyas, daughter of Jimmy Dyas, '46. Club members are representing the University at area high school "college nights" under the chairmanship of Harry McCune, '61. Chapter president is Richard McConaughy, '43, MFA '46, 6914 W. Honnen Dr., Indianapolis.

NORTH CAROLINA

CHARLOTTE — Dr. and Mrs. W. J. Porter (Lavelle Tripp, '51) were hosts for a steak fry May 25, the third meeting of the year for area alumni. Attendance has been nearly 85 per cent. Alumni moving to the area should contact Dick Roberdeaux, '60, at 366-5554.

MASSACHUSETTS

BOSTON — Chapter members were among the 1,000 persons who visited the Edna Hibbel Gallery Oct. 8 for the opening of the Hostetler-Karsh sculpture and photography exhibit. Bill Steinhardt, '50, club president, welcomed the Hostetlers, President Alden and Ohio alumni to the affair. Massachusetts alumni were hosts for a reception for the Ohio hockey team and coaches following the Ohio-Salem State match

Dec. 18. The chapter kicked off its 1969 activities Jan. 30 with a wine tasting party on the Bentley College campus. The party, at which President Alden was a special guest, was in commemoration of the signing of the Ohio Company Charter at the Bunch of Grapes Tavern in Boston in 1786. The Massachusetts club is making final plans for a March 6 reception for prospective students and their parents. Alumni may contact Steinhardt at Bentley College.

NEW YORK

GREATER NEW YORK — Hosts at an afternoon garden party in Tenafly, N.J., Sept. 7 honoring Mr. and Mrs. David Hostetler, MFA '49, and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Ellis, '57, were Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Hodes (Rebecca Breslow), both '43. The party was a fund-raising benefit for the Jesse Zousmer Memorial Fund. The chapter sponsored a supper party Nov. 6 honoring concert pianist George Katz following his recital in Carnegie Hall. Katz's performance, his second in Carnegie Hall, was sponsored by the University's John C. Baker Educational Fund. A holiday cocktail party Dec. 6 brought 160 New York/New Jersey alumni together to end one of the club's most successful years. Plans for 1969 include a reception for prospective students and their parents at the Hotel Manhattan March 7 and a dinner dance May 16 honoring President and Mrs. Alden at the Tavern on the Green in Central Park. Area alumni should contact Dr. Emil Kustin, '40, after 5 p.m. at 212/CA 8-6916.

ROCHESTER — Alumni in the Buffalo-Rochester area met for cocktails and dinner Oct. 4 at the Country House. ALUMNI REPORT

OUTSTANDING ALUMNUS

Ralph F. "Sid" Beckert's unofficial title, "Mr. Alumni," took on added significance Oct. 26 when the 1923 Ohio graduate was named Outstanding Alumnus of 1968 by the Homecoming general committee.

The award, presented in a ceremony preceding the Ohio-Dayton Homecoming game, was based on Beckert's outstanding service to the community, the Alumni Association and the University. He was nominated for the honor by alumni chapters across the country.

Beckert, professor of accounting, will retire in June after 42 years on the business administration faculty. He has been active in campus affairs as adviser to such organizations as Blue Key and Delta Sigma Pi and currently serves as treasurer of the Alumni Association.

PRIZEWINNING SATIRE

Stanley H. Schulman, '64, MA '65, has received the $500 second place award in the third annual World Law Television Script Contest for his contemporary satire, "War Ratings Slip: Sponsor May Cancel."

Schulman's award broke precedent with past competition in that a second prize had never before been awarded. One of the judges, Richard Hanser of NBC's Project 20, remarked that Schulman's script had "enough wit and sparkle to put many a professional skit to shame."

"War Ratings . . ." earned Schulman a $100 award last spring in the preliminary competition. The satire relates what happens when a television rating system discovers that one member of its audience is tired of looking at war on television.

Sponsored by the World Law Fund, the competition is part of an educational program to advance study and public discussion of the basic requirements of an adequate world system to prevent war.

Schulman is working toward the PhD in radio-television at Ohio. Mrs. Schulman (Suzanne Fecke '64, MA '66) is an editor for the Ohio University Press.

ELLIOTT LECTURER

Dr. James R. Patrick, '52, nationally recognized researcher in infant crib deaths, presented the Rush Elliott Lecture during the University's third annual lectureship weekend Oct. 4-5.

Dr. Patrick, director of laboratories at Children's Hospital in the District of Columbia, talked on "Sudden Unexpected Death in Infancy — A Problem in Research."

In addition to his duties at Children's Hospital, Dr. Patrick, who received the MD from Yale, is a consultant at Children's Convalescent Hospital and assistant professor of pathology at Georgetown University. He was the subject of a recent feature in Life and he received the Certificate of Merit last June at the Alumni Luncheon.

The lectureship weekend honors Dr. Rush E. Elliott, '24, head of the University's premedical program since 1924. Approximately 58 alumni and guests attended the two-day event, which included a reception at the Elliotts' home, the Ohio-Toledo football game and a banquet at the Ohio University Inn.

AWARDS CHAIRMAN ASKS FOR MERIT NOMINATIONS

Dear Alumnus,

The Certificate of Merit, presented on Alumni Day, is the highest award an Ohio alumnus can receive. In bestowing it, the Alumni Association recognizes alumni—and on occasion non-alumni—who, through accomplishments in their fields and service to Ohio University, have credited not only themselves, but the University as well.

The awards committee feels a sense of deep responsibility to select persons truly worthy of the honor. We invite you to share this responsibility.

Alice Edwards Wright, '27; Lil Greer, '25; Dr. Ray Lupse, '36; Bill Steinhart, '50; Al Riedel, '52, and I will meet in mid-April to review nominations. May we have yours no later than April 1?

Sincerely,

Don Shafer, '37, Chairman

Homecoming Meeting

Alumni Directors Approve Resolutions

Alumni President Eugene Rinta, '38, called on the association's directors to "dedicate themselves to the major problems of the University" during the board's Homecoming meeting Oct. 25.

"Each member is to assume his responsibility by directing his efforts and energies to the issues of the time and in total as a group," Rinta told the 15 directors in attendance.

During the meeting, the board also heard from President Alden, Executive Vice President James Whalen and Jerry Reese, director of admissions.

The following resolutions were unanimously approved:

Trustees—Endorsing the action taken by the trustees in protecting freedom of speech on campus, establishing rules of conduct, approving the sale of 3.2 beer in Baker Center and extending a no-hours policy to junior women.

President—Expressing deep regret that President Alden has announced his resignation, but furthering the board's gratitude for the outstanding leadership he has given the University during his tenure.

Athletics—Expressing full support for the goal of excelling in intercollegiate athletics, just as the board supports excellence in all academic areas.

Help Us Find Ohio's Next President

Dear Fellow Alumni:

The importance of the Alumni Association in the total Ohio University community was recently pointed up by two actions of the Board of Trustees, both related to the resignation of President Alden.

The first of these actions was my appointment as association president to a five-man selection committee responsible for recommending to the board candidates to succeed Dr. Alden. I have the honor of serving on this committee with Dr. George Lobdell, the faculty representative, and the board representatives, Russell P. Herrold, '16; C. Paul Stocker, '26, and Joseph B. Hall, the committee chairman.

Subsequently, Chairman Fred H. Johnson, '22, of the Board of Trustees announced the appointment of two special advisory committees to aid in the selection of Dr. Alden's successor. One is a 15-member University advisory committee with representatives from the faculty, administration, student body, nonacademic employees and the Athens community. The other is an alumni advisory committee with representatives from several alumni chapters, the alumni Board of Directors and the Ohio University Fund. (See "Presidential Search," p. 8.)

The committees will receive names of candidates, develop criteria for selection of the president and screen candidates.

Selecting candidates to succeed a man who has given great leadership and prestige to our Alma Mater and strong support to our alumni program will not be an easy task, but the significant accomplishments of recent years, the challenge of future goals and our University's great heritage should attract many qualified candidates.

You can help in the selection process by sending to me the names and available biographical data on any persons you believe should be considered. Your recommendations will be screened in the advisory committee and presidential selection committee process. The final selection will be made by the Board of Trustees from the candidates found most suitable.

If you have a candidate, please let me hear from you promptly.

Sincerely yours,
Eugene F. Rinta, '38, President
Ohio University Alumni Association

Ring-a-Ding-Ding

Your String Getting a Little Raggedy?

Remember? You put it there to remind you to order your class ring. Okay, so you've gotten accustomed to the string. That's no reason to put off ordering your ring—you can always wear the string on another finger to remind you of something else. The rings, produced for Ohio University by Josten's, are 10K yellow gold (white gold's $5 extra) and you may choose your birthstone or black onyx to set your ring apart.

The "class side" shows the University seal, the Ohio Bobcat and your year. The other side features Galbreath Chapel and your degree. The man's ring costs $37 for the open back; $41.30 for the plastic-closed back, and $45.65 for the deluxe, gold-closed back. Ladies' miniature rings will cost you $32.70 for the open back and $35.85 for the deluxe model. Greek letter encrusting is $3 for two letters or $5 for three.

If your string's getting raggedy, write today to The Ohio Alumnus, 102 Davis Hall, Athens, Ohio 45701, and we'll send you details and an order blank. Tie a string around your finger to help you remember.

CUTLER HALL

fect gift for him.) Artist Paul Andrews has painted a series of four watercolors of campus scenes, and the Alumni Association is making them available to you at ridiculous prices. Three of the full-color scenes measure 11 x 14 inches with mat, and the College Green measures 16 x 20 with mat. Each scene is individually rendered on the finest watercolor paper; these are not printed reproductions. You may order the scenes either individually or as a set, either framed or unframed. The coupon below gives you the prices . . . all you need to do is fill it out and send money!

We'll Teach You a Thing or Two . . .

You've been here during the fall, winter and spring, but have you ever spent the summer in Athens? Summer Session '69 promises to be cool in many ways: many classrooms are air-conditioned, and air-conditioned living facilities are available; there'll be concerts, summer theater and the MIA film series, and Burr Oak, Lake Hope, Dow Lake and other state parks and recreation areas are within an hour's drive. You'll be able to take graduate or undergraduate courses in just about any field, and there will be workshops, institutes and conferences geared to special interests. In-service education courses are offered for teachers. Spend ten weeks (June 16-Aug. 23) or enroll for one of the two five-week terms (June 16-July 19 and July 21-Aug. 23). Summer Session on the new campuses in Belmont County, Chillicothe, Lancaster, Portsmouth or Zanesville will run from June 16-July 19. All classrooms on the new campuses are air-conditioned. If you're interested in Summer Session '69 in Athens or at one of the new campuses, drop a postcard to The Ohio Alumnus, 102 Davis Hall, Athens, Ohio 45701. We'll get a catalog and an application to you as soon as they're available.
